FROM THE RABBIS

To the officers, members and seatholders of our Congregation we extend our best wishes for a happy new year.

The departing year has brought to our people an unusual measure of blessedness, but it has also given us an equally large portion of grief. The establishment of the Jewish Agency through which all forces of Judaism have been united for a great and holy purpose—the upbuilding of Palestine as the national homeland of the Jewish People—is, undoubtedly, an achievement holding forth promises of rich and glorious results for the future. Sorrow was, however, visited upon the house of Israel in the calamity that befell our people in the holy land. Students and saints, heroes all—gave up their lives and fell as martyrs on Palestine's soil.

The Agency and the Catastrophe both are a test and a challenge. May the former find us willing to lend a hand even as the latter found us ready to shed a tear.

May the year with its curses end—may the year with its blessings begin.

TO PARENTS

With the opening of the general school season many parents are, undoubtedly, confronted with the problem of the Jewish education of their children. Although our Congregation conducts no Hebrew school under its immediate auspices, that function being excellently fulfilled by the Central Jewish Institute adjoining our Synagogue, we feel, nevertheless, that there might be other ways in which direct service may be rendered by us in this matter. There are many parents who prefer private instruction in Hebrew for their children. Rabbi Lookstein, therefore, requests such parents to communicate with him so that he might recommend to them well trained and qualified teachers to whom the instruction of the young may safely and profitably be entrusted. Individual programmes of study will be made up for each child by the rabbi together with the teachers. Constant supervision will be exercised so that the progress of each child will be carefully watched and encouraged. Any requests in this matter will receive the prompt attention of the rabbi.
