the same year he became rector of St. Mary's in the city of York. He was a man of great learning, and his name is often mentioned in the histories of that period. He died in 1525.
He was buried in the church of St. Mary's, where a tablet marks the spot. His tomb was removed to the church of St. Mary's in the city of York, where it still remains.

the following day he was ready to go to the next of his stations. Some months before this time he had been engaged in the construction of a new church at the village of Llanfairfechan, and had therefore been absent from his post for some time.
He had now completed his work, and was about to return to his post, when he received a letter from the chief of the only military division in the country, informing him that a detachment had been sent to Llanfairfechan to take charge of the fortifications and garrison there, and that he was therefore no longer required at his post. He was greatly disappointed at this news, as he had been looking forward to a quiet and peaceful life in the quiet village of Llanfairfechan, and had been preparing himself for it by a course of study and self-improvement. He nevertheless submitted to the will of Providence, and set out on his journey to the new post, which was situated in a wild and desolate part of the country, far removed from any civilized society.

I have written to you and have received your letter from the 20th and am sorry to say that I have not yet had time to go over it in detail. I will do so as soon as possible. In the meantime, I would like to say that I am very pleased with your suggestion about the new name for the journal. I think it is a good one and hope that it will be adopted.
